Arovax AntiSpyware is one of the apps supposed to enhance the overall security level of your computer, trying to detect and remove any spyware on your computer. Although it's a security software solution, Arovax AntiSpyware is impressively easy to use, mostly thanks to the well-organized interface and the reduced number of configuration options. For example, the main window of the app lets you initiate a new scan, access settings, schedule a scan or open the help file in case you need assistance while using the program. There are no predefined scanning modes, which means Arovax AntiSpyware displays all drives on your computer and lets you pick the folder or drives to scan. Plus, the application doesn't sport other configuration screens and you don't need to define the actions to perform when spyware files are detected on your machine. The scanning process usually takes a few minutes and the main window turns into a stats screen that shows the number of scanned processes, registry entries, cookies or files. Once the process comes to an end, you're allowed to see the infected files and clean the system entirely. As you can see, Arovax AntiSpyware also boasts a settings tab, but your options are pretty limited because it only lets you to run a scan at Windows startup, run scan after update and pick the language you wish to use. Arovax AntiSpyware remains very light on hardware resources all the time and at the end of the scan it displays a detailed report concerning the found spyware, offering you the power to act accordingly.
