There are several reasons for this, including the recent weather and mild winter, falling spot prices due to the over supply situation, the limited utility of LNG at this time and an expected increase in demand due to power plant load growth which will lead to more gas-fired generation added. It will also force more open access to the utility market on gas prices and may make it easier to convince generation owners to use gas. The outlook for the year for natural gas is decent. Natural gas futures climbed to a 10-year high of $9.70/MMBtu on Friday. However, with demand outlook on
