Why does it not work? p.s. I know for a fact that the strings exist in the file. I can see them when I open the file in notepad. A: The problem is simply caused by a corrupted file. The strings aren't actually stored in the file. You can try to repair the file by saving it again (as a text file) and then copy all the lines to notepad. After you confirmed that all the correct information is in the new file, copy it back to the original file. Or just rename the corrupted file to a new, non-corrupted name.

Q: Django - How to show all classes from model I want to show all the classes from some model. I did `searchclass = DatabaseObject.objects.filter(model_name="search")` where "search" is model name. But then I want to use templates to show it. How can I achieve that? I tried to use `meta.model.model` but it returns only one class at once.

A: You can use `model.__class__` for that. I only have 1 electrochemistry, photophysical and theoretical studies. The spectroscopic and electrochemical studies reveal the mixed valent nature of the complexes and the semi-oxidized nature of the ruthenium(II) species in the oxidation process. The structures of these complexes have been refined by single-crystal X-ray diffraction. The structure of 3 is similar to that of the prototypical $\text{Re}(\text{bpy})(3)$ cation and the structure of the species 4 has been determined for the first time in the literature.
