learning about food and the art of cooking – and the recipe book has been put together with his best chefs’ recipes. By: Walker James

Earlier this year I was invited by Taylors of London to test out a new cookbook that they had just launched. It’s a book dedicated to their brand new range of tea and coffee and what better way to do it, than by cooking with the brand. I wasn’t quite sure what to expect. I had seen the Taylors range on a few occasions but never really looked too closely at them, it was always Mr Taylors that I admired! He would always whisk me away for special breaks at the range and if I could, I'd be there every Sunday with a flask of coffee. So, for my big tea-drinking day I was thrilled when Taylor of London asked me if I'd like to test out their new range and so the dishes that have gone into this cookbook were prepared by Taylor himself and his team. It was great to chat to them during the production of the book as we all discussed how the range works. I was also lucky to prepare a couple of dishes alongside him, the first one being the Shanghai buns which he had prepared for Christmas. I have to say they were delicious. The second
