The polyherbal supplement Phytona has been found to be effective against dengue fever by a multinational team of researchers The polyherbal supplement Phytona has been found to be effective against dengue fever by a multinational team of researchers A multinational team of researchers have claimed the discovery of a compound that effectively controls the symptoms of dengue, a mosquito-borne illness with more than 200,000 deaths a year. Ijaz S. Qureshi, MD, Chairperson of Department of Internal Medicine, Postgraduate Institute of Medical Education and Research, Chandigarh, led the team that discovered the compound from Phytona, an Indian herbal remedy believed to boost the immune system. "When a patient with dengue fever presents, the symptoms are so severe, especially in children, that many times we recommend to administer unnecessary drugs just because a visit to a physician is necessary," he said. "For many years, research on dengue was done in mosquitoes or mice. But now the holy grail has been achieved, the results of our research have opened a new dimension for dengue fever, a disease and its treatment have now finally changed." Qureshi said that this new compound has reduced the inflammation and pain in the body more than the present symptomatic treatment provided by the physicians. "The patient only needs to take one tablet of Phytona twice a day for seven days and all the symptoms of fever, the so-called Dengue Shock Syndrome, will go away," he said. Qureshi said this is a positive step in the fight against dengue fever that has posed a huge threat to India. "Dengue Fever which is now endemic in India is found in many other countries as well. Even in developed countries like the United States of America and Australia, the disease is not uncommon," he said. "In India, it is the most common cause of hospitalization for acute febrile illness in children." However, there is still a lot to be done. "We are very excited about this but our research is still in progress," he added. setResult(data, Activity.RESULT_OK); finish();
