Teaming up on Pixel Puzzles Ultimate is a rousing adventure with a timer. But you must solve it before the timer runs out! This is a game of strategy as well as puzzle solving. When you solve a puzzle, it will automatically disappear for the next puzzle. The only thing left will be a feeling of appreciation for being a genius. You can ask for help from your friends, the Internet or your smartphone. You can also pause the game at anytime. The Internet and your smartphone will be used to play online multiplayer puzzle games. Q: Python version of R's as.character() Using R version 3.3.0 I can convert a character string to a vector of character vectors using as.character(): Example: as.character(c("foo", "bar")) # [1] "foo" "bar" Does Python version of as.character() exist? I know I can use character to make this conversion, but I am wondering whether there is some better solution. A: You can use str.encode('ascii', 'backslashreplace') to get the string back to ascii: >>> 'bar'.encode('ascii', 'backslashreplace') 'bar' and then decode it using 'backslashreplace' instead: >>> 'bar'.decode('backslashreplace') 'bar' Using string slice we can slice the string to return the first or second and first character, but we need to apply strip() as the backslash is a special character in the encoding: >>> s = 'bar' >>> 'bar'.encode('ascii', 'backslashreplace').decode('backslashreplace').encode('ascii').decode('ascii')[1] 'b' >>> 'bar'.encode('ascii', 'backslashreplace').decode('backslashreplace').encode('ascii').decode('ascii')[2] 'r' Q: Portuguese localization in iPhone SDK I localized my app in German and it is working fine in Germany (iPhone 4). Now, the German people are very skilled with phones and iPhone and they find it very difficult to type in "ö" into the mobile keyboard. I know that we can

"Cilie Oldphartz is about to change your railroad life". That's what they say... Oldphartz is a mountainous and dense area of forestry. It offers a wide range of useful trees and plants for resources. It is the perfect area to build and operate a logging railroad. And that is exactly what the Cilie Oldphartz Railroad Company is all about. With its own logging railroad and a saw mill it provides much of the raw material needed to make a living. Logs come from the forests and are then transported to the saw mill. The woods then become sawn timber, boxes and boards, and once processed the timber is sent to the town's wharfs. Cilie is a remote little port town on a mountain. And that is exactly where Oldphartz Log Railroad Company comes in. "Cilie Oldphartz is about to change your railroad life". That's what they say...
