of the 33-year database of chronic hepatitis B virus infection in Catalonia, Spain. The aim of this work was to describe the demographic, clinical and laboratory characteristics of chronic hepatitis B virus (HBV) infection in the region of Catalonia. This was a retrospective study of 875 patients in which the variables of interest were: gender, age, exposure to risk factors, comorbidities, clinical status (defined as the sum of the patient's signs, symptoms and laboratory data), and viral and histological data. Overall, 97% of patients were hepatitis B surface antigen (HBsAg) positive and 3.7% anti-HBc positive. The clinical stage of the disease was alanine aminotransferase (ALT) > or =150 IU/l (stage 1), ALT > or =300 IU/l (c9d1549cdd

Q: Run postgres script via ansible using the database I have a postgres database on which I run a shell script which opens a connection and runs a series of queries and then saves the results to a CSV. I want to run this using Ansible. However I can't figure out how to do this using the same ansible script or variables. The shell script looks something like this.

$ cat /etc/ansible/hosts [database] dbuser=postgres dbpassword= dbhost=192.168.2.174 dbname=testdb dbport=5432 cat csv1.sql pg_createcluster -h $dbhost -P $dbport -D $dbname -U $dbuser -W -v -p 64 -c I want to run this script in the context of the database so that the variables are populated. For example dbhost has a value "192.168.2.174" and $dbhost has the value "192.168.2.174" when Ansible runs the script. I haven't been able to figure this out. A: I've found a way to do this using a few flags on the ansible command. The first (most important) flag is -e which is how ansible will execute the script on the remote machine. Then the other two flags are --connection-mode and --connection-timeout to specify how to connect and the timeout for that connection. I've posted this code below.

--- - hosts: database remote_user: postgres tasks: - name: Remote shell script execution postgresql_connection: timeout: 1 connection_mode: single csv_sql: | pg_createcluster -h 192.168.2.174 -P 5432 -D

testdb -U postgres -W -v 64 -p 64 -c csv_file:
~/.ansible/test.csv

09-17 Since its beginning in 2009, Escape Room has never been able to outrun those priced to drop. Over the past few years the series has seen a number of changes, which include a largely permanent 1-player mode and a focus on the entire game experience instead of the atmosphere or stories. Much of these changes have come from an attempt by Escape Room's parent company, Starrpoint, to trim their budget and risk management procedures to secure their future. The level of change over the past few years can be seen from a list of what were to be fixed: □ There was an absurd amount of broken coding and a near complete lack of testing on Escape Room's multiplayer mode. □ Starrpoint actively campaigned to lower the price of the game after developing an official multiplayer mode, which they wanted to release at a low cost in order to stave off bankruptcy. □ The game's 1-player mode was abandoned in an effort to lower costs and focus on the full featured multi-player Escape Room experience. □ Starrpoint has made the decision to lower the price of the game, rather than merely delaying price changes. □ President Starr has been fired for making poor decisions and not listening to the staff, and it has been reported that the company is attempting to recover from its mistakes with the help of a Hollywood cult classic called Super 8. □ Stuck on a desert island (or better yet, Florida), our miserable escape room player would rather take up arms to fight the murderous marauders in a desperate attempt to get back to civilization. These changes have had unforeseen consequences on the development and release of the past two Escape Rooms. Sure, the games themselves have been fun, but the player experiences have far and away failed to meet the expected experience of the series, and we're left with the final product. Even when Escape Room was released on August 26th 2014, it was already clear that things were just not the same. The most notable difference was easily the gameplay improvements. Not only did the developers do a great job on the UI, but it improved the core gameplay dramatically. Gone was the lack of direction provided by the developer. Instead, the player was surrounded by surviving adrenaline junkies who constantly questioned their choices, looking for inspiration and direction to improve their scores or unlock the next area. The Focus on Gameplay aspect was gone, but more important the Focus on the Scene was incorporated. Since the

It is a new game from the same producer as the highly-rated entries in the Devil vs. God series. We have changed the gameplay system, including the addition of new kinds of weapons, in order to create a more enjoyable game. Storyline: The Devil ran away from Hell. As he was leaving, he said to the God that he was planning on devoting his time to creating a more miserable world. The God replied that he would happily put up with the Devil's good qualities and allow him to roam free. "...No, it can't be...The God is only in charge of life! No matter who ascends to the second rank and who does not, that means the Buddha is God's subordinate...?!?" The Devil then suffered a severe trauma, but he couldn't find any way to escape his suffering. "I can't stop thinking about the sins I committed in this world... I can only find peace in Nirvana... I'd like to escape from this world." "The time of the 'God' has come. The time when humans were at their saddest and humans can only wallow in their misery...I believe people should enjoy life. People's lives should be meaningful. That's all I ask. Then..." "I vowed at that time that this was the last time I'd remember that God was my God. If someone like that were to fall, then it must be by his own will! I'll be his opponent this time! My mission is to create human virtues! It can't be helped if he ascends to Nirvana!" "...The God is gone? It is only the Devil that is here?" "How long do I have?" "Is there anywhere I can escape to?" "I want to create a world where there are no sins!" "How long do I have? How long?" "The Devil is alive? That is...!! How old was he the last time?" "This world?... You are...a cruel world!" "The Devil is worried that he will end up sealed inside Hell. He has escaped from Hell and come to this world to compete with the God." "The Devil just said he is a non-God. And he said that his objective was to create a world free of sin. That's a terrible crime." "Why is there a weapon in this world? It's just a weapon? As if it were made from the 'God'...!"
