I guess some of you are playing on mobile devices and therefore can not read much, so I thought I would show a preview of some of the stats off of a PDF on the game mechanics. Stat Quo is a board game for 2 players where players take on the role of in a war between two mighty contenders; the Aspirant Alliance and New Terrans. They are pitted against each other in a conflict aimed at having the most powerful and strongest army and thus gaining material and status in the New Terran Coalition. The players have the use of two of 3 types of units; infantry, troops, and the Tesla Tanks. These three types of unit have very different stats. The infantry have the most number of miniatures and are meant to be used in the infantry battles. However, they are not meant to penetrate the battle front of the enemies and the doctrines are just used to quickly clear out the edge of the battle front. The troops units are better suited to penetrating the front and are also used heavily when assaulting against strongholds and to accumulate the most

• Starfinder - • RPG - Creating: • Starfinder - • RPG - I made this completely by myself with no budget, concept, or the desire to charge for it. I did spend quite a bit of time doing research and creating all the maps, creatures, and items so I hope you enjoy it! I have updated the last 10-20 minutes of every encounter to add in the hit locations and items. I am an Amateur D&D player, GM, artist, and simply a fan of the Pathfinder RPG and Starfinder RPG. How to play: The main setting for this is the Sun, and the moon. The main sun is basically the same game as space but without all the spacetime. The sun is 9.7 billion km/5.6 AU away from the core of our own Milky Way Galaxy, the plane of fire is roughly between 4 and 12 light years away, and most everything is farther than that. The sun does not have a gravitational effect, but has its own magnetic field. The sun's magnetic field is modified by the efreet, who have some unique abilities. Solar system information: This is a single solar system where all of these adventures took place. Planet Stats: This is a single star that was reshaped into its current shape by efreet-powered artificial gravity. Dome Occupied: It's a dome city in the deep sun, built by anassanois. Kahlannal: It's a deep-sun city built by anassanois. Dwarf Stars: Kahlannal is a place of peace. Planets: • Marble: Marble is a tectonic planet. • Qat: Qat is a rocky desert world. • Merc: Merc is a gas giant. • Mithara: Mithara is an ice world. • Papola: Papola is a mineral world. • Sting: Sting is a scattered metal world. • Torun: Torun is a rocky and sandy world. • Torun 2: Torun 2 is a volcanic xradar" has been discovered. We're prepared. We have drones with 24/7 radar running. ~~~ sfuckas What's the big deal? Is it beyond the capability of the public to build a satellite that's up there doing its job all the time? If not, why wouldn't we do it? ~~~ jessriedel Usually when people say "no one can do this" they mean "nobody is trying to do it", not "nobody is capable of doing it". ~~~ a3n I find it interesting that it always seems to be described as a matter of capability when the task at hand is a type of surveillance system. That is to say, public or private. I wish I knew what the distinction was: "Someone will never be able to do this?" Or "No one is ever willing to do this?" ~~~ VladRussian2 >if someone actually cared about the underclass, then they would actually figure out how to provide minimum acceptable conditions of living to the significant percent of the planet's population that actually wants to be governed by them, rather than by some handful of ill-intentioned people who will often take power only to use it for their personal benefit, and thus they would enforce if you don't like it, create something better. ~~~ yxenol The thing is, I think we do care, you can see it for example in nearly every popular online game, MMOs and the very popular PC building game. You actually feel you're accomplishing something and working for good of the people not in competition with them. These things are created by smart developers, not by power hungry, mindless drones. ~~~ sien You are mostly correct, except in the case of makers of STEM games. Because of the very level playing field, these are often competitions between players in the best possible team. If you are not part of the best possible team your experience is lagging behind the others. There are many people that have no interest in the team aspect, and just want to drink the same power and DO things. The DO means making things (NOT simulating things) and isn't based on the team aspect. And so the team aspect remains somewhere in the background
