What filesystem is supported in the official Raspberry Pi form factor? Is it some filesystem that's known to work with Raspberry Pi or does it require something else? A: I can't find any documentation that says it's not a "Raspberry Pi-compatible" filesystem. But, as this list of hardware supported by the "official" filesystem, it seems that most of the features of that filesystem are certainly not supported by the official device (or, at least, that have been tried by me). Many of those features might be Linux-specific, but most probably will not be. I would guess that it's a subset of the basic features and operations that you can find on the official SD cards (files and filesystems that will probably work on other hardware). You can use it anyway. I did that, just to try it. There are also others, like ZFS, that you could think about. I would say that if you want to have a more robust filesystem, you can use FAT32 or NTFS (WIndows compatibilty) and if you are feeling brave, you can try to use ext4 (though I don't know if it is really an "official" filesystem). Q: Where can I find the bootloader of Ubuntu 18.04? I'm planning to dual-boot Ubuntu and macOS on a new computer. I have an internal drive I can use for that. I recently installed Linux Mint on my first PC. On my second PC, I had some trouble to install GNU GRUB on a HDD and on a SSD, and a GNU LILO on the other HDD. I'd like to avoid this 0cc13bf012
