The Nursery and The Kindergarten The Western Front The Adventures of Robin Hood. Revenge Of The Fireflies Movie Watch Online Alton B. Parker Alton Benjamin Parker (June 11, 1913 - October 6, 2001) was an American composer, orchestra conductor and arranger who worked with Tommy Dorsey and other bandleaders. Biography Parker was born in Manhattan, New York, to parents Herbert and Mildred (née Brown). He received his early musical training from his father Herbert who owned a music store in Manhattan and later New Rochelle, New York. After graduating from the Juilliard School of Music in 1933, he served during World War II as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy, and scored the feature-length documentary, The Battle of Midway, which won an Academy Award for Best Documentary Feature in 1942. Parker continued composing after the war, and arranged most of the music for the jazz orchestras featuring Billy Eckstine, Tito Puente, Benny Goodman, and Lucky Millinder. He was best known for his work with Tommy Dorsey, who used him on his radio shows and recordings from 1938-1949. During this time, Parker conducted the NBC Radio Orchestra as a freelance arranger, and, in 1947, was selected to conduct the Czechoslovak Radio Symphony Orchestra. Parker later became the musical director for the State Department during the early 1950s. His compositions have been recorded on the Decca, Capitol and ABC Records labels. Personal life He was married three times. His first marriage in 1943 ended in divorce in 1948. In 1951, he married Joan Teresa D'Arcy who survived him. Parker died from cancer in 2001. Tyrese, 'No Such Thing as Half-Black' News The actor's new album includes all the lessons he learned from being black and being in the entertainment business. Tyrese, 'No Such Thing as Half-Black' Tyrese Gibson, who is coming off the heels of a trio of R&B albums, has released a new album entitled "No Such Thing as Half-Black." On the new release, the actor, singer and director turns his focus to the pitfalls of being black in the entertainment business. As a person of color, Gibson, 35, draws a stark comparison between how he was treated in the entertainment world and how his Caucasian counterparts have fared. "Everything was easy for them," Gibson tells Billboard. "I remember that my opening theme was 'I was Born in the Bay,' which is a song that's like on the radio. Anything that was black or hip-hop was different [than anything I did as a child] -- and I don't know why. I just connected to the culture." While he was a recording artist during his childhood, it wasn't until he was a successful one that he realized the hurdles of being black in the entertainment industry. "What I learned from the music industry was that I had to battle," he says. "I had to do what everybody else did. I had to be the same as everyone else. I had to leave my blackness at the door. [It] is what I hated the most. It was hurting people to be the same as me." While he's been busy lately focusing on his acting career and producing music, the actor also remains actively engaged in charity work. "We want to do for the gay community in Georgia what we did for the African-American community in Harlem in New York," he
