A series of mutant laminin G domains, lacking the N-terminal and C-terminal domains, were constructed to assess the contribution of the fourth and fifth extracellular loops (4ECL and 5ECL) to the stability of the protein. The protein was expressed in Pichia pastoris and the stability of the protein was assessed by measuring the change of sigmoidal unfolding curves using circular dichroism spectroscopy. The results demonstrate that both the 4ECL and 5ECL are responsible for the high stability of the laminin G domain. The buried surface area is an important parameter for assessing the thermostability of proteins. The DSSP server was used to calculate the buried surface area of the laminin G domain. Interestingly, the inserted protein has the highest buried surface area and the mutants had a reduced buried surface area, suggesting that the increase of the buried surface area plays an important role in the thermal stability of the protein. As the N and C domains play an important role in cell adhesion, the effect of N- and C-terminal domains was also analyzed. The results show that the absence of the N and C domains significantly reduced the stability of the protein, and the stability of the molecule decreased with a decrease in the number of domains, indicating that the N and C domains have a stabilizing effect on the laminin G domain.Apple's iPad mini models could be available as soon as October A new report has suggested that Apple's iPad mini models could be available as soon as October. The reports, from The Wall Street Journal, say that Apple's iPad mini models could be available as soon as October. It's a cloud-based server application that provides tools for people to communicate, share information, and organize work. The product is the result of a joint effort by Microsoft and the Nonprofit Technology Group (NTT), which owns the OpenText Corporation. How is SharePoint different from collaboration tools that are already available on the market? It's not just the possibility to share and manage documents and even files. The biggest difference can be seen when it comes to the collaboration process. In simple words, SharePoint is a very dynamic and collaborative environment. It provides collaboration environments to teams of all sizes, regardless of the size of the teams. It consists of a set of services and APIs that allow teams to collaborate in their own workspaces.
