get ack-grep to search all files in a directory tree In my bash script, I have the following command: ack-grep -n "Redis server \([^\\]*\\" $SRC I am trying to search for all strings containing the word redis and when they are found, print out the filename. Unfortunately, when I give this command it outputs the filename of only one of the files in the directory tree (i.e. my_script_dir/zip/file1.txt). Do you have any idea as to why this is happening? The input files look like:

```
#include
"json/jvalue.h"
#include
"c/json_private.h"

---

... Thanks for your help, and many thanks if you can explain why the output is what it is, as it is a little vexing. A: If you're using GNU grep, you can use -R. If you're using ack, you can use ack-grep. FOR AMONGST the many unconventional strategies behind
