August 28, 2012 To Catch a Giant is Dying of Hunger Once upon a time, I wrote a tongue-in-cheek, but not untruthful, press release that is currently sitting on my website in the "About" section. One of my friends took a copy of that press release and posted it on his website with his signature disclaimer: If you have to read this, you're a sad, sad person. I'm not saying that not reading it could lead to that, but could it be that people who read it would be less likely to vote for a candidate or party that supports abortion? I have no idea, but that might just be the fun part of intellectual vanity. Now some people say that they want to catch a big, fat, giant lobster before it can catch them. It is a good thing to catch a "big, fat, giant lobster" like that, if that's what you want. They say that, but to me, that's not what they really mean. Anyway, I am now able to disprove that theory. I have seen a "big, fat, giant lobster" recently and been able to get a picture of it. Also, it is not dead yet. It is sick, though, and you can see that in the picture, but I did not catch it. I caught it with another lobster, and we are going to starve it to death. I do not think that will take long. It is almost time for Labor Day, and I don't think I'm going to have any Labor Day BBQs this year. So I'm going to take my big, fat, giant lobster and drown it in a well. I will take pictures of that. I will prove that the theory doesn't work, and that it was a stupid idea anyway. I'm not sure how to put water in a well to drown a "big, fat, giant lobster", but I think I can figure that out. But first, I have a new picture to post. It is not a picture of my new friends, the poor gigantic lobster that I caught, nor a picture of my new friends, Gail and Rick, who told me they would help me drown it in a well, nor a picture of my new friend, "Piranha" from Fetch.com. Why? Because I didn't have a camera handy when I took that picture of the lobster, and Piranha said I

Q: Verify an FTP client on windows What is the best approach to verify an FTP client on windows? Would it be possible to see if the transfer files is done as originally requested? A: Your best option is to make sure that you have the latest supported version of the browser you are running. Each browser has some option that allows you to see the activity of that particular connection. In Firefox, it is under the Network tab in the status tab. In Chrome, it is in the lower left corner. Also, try enabling Logging in your FTP client. If you see any errors in the log, you should be able to understand what's going on. If you have any scripting experience, you should also be able to parse the log yourself and troubleshoot it. SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The nation's top U.S. drug enforcement agency is reversing course and saying vaping has become a gateway drug. Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced new policy changes Tuesday. He called the use of e-cigarettes "an epidemic." He said people "have started vaping and have moved from vaping to inhaling the gluey, highly-addictive, artificial nicotine." Sessions also said more than $1 billion has been spent by the industry on marketing to young people. A White House official said the administration believes they're targeted at kids and not adults. The official said vape shops are only required to obtain a business license and don't have to undergo regular inspections.
