Long-term passage of an SV3T3-transformed mouse fibroblast line (KHT) in the absence of the endogenous c-src gene product leads to a complete reversal of these cells to an epithelial state, as judged from morphological and biological criteria. Initiation of SV3T3 c-src-minus cells is abolished and only a few polyribosomes are visible in the cytoplasm. However, the non-ribosomal end products of the RNA and protein synthetic pathways, e.g. rRNA and actin, appear to be synthesized normally. In contrast, cell surface molecules such as the G(M1) ganglioside and fibronectin are not synthesized and are tightly associated with the plasma membrane. In the absence of c-src, there is no production of a functional Src kinase which is required for actin filament organization and for normal actin turnover.// // main.m // 14 // Created by yimingyou on 15/10/26. // Copyright © 2015 yimingyou.
