And I am positive it is a DAC with noise cancelling micCys273 mutants of mitochondrial bifunctional enzyme I. Genetic and biochemical analyses of a "mild" mitochondrial myopathy. The molecular basis of complex I deficiency associated with a "mild" mitochondrial myopathy (case 1) was characterized in a 45-year-old woman with a 13-year history of exercise intolerance and muscle weakness. Case 1 had a stable phenotype over a 6-year period, demonstrated attenuated activity of succinate dehydrogenase in muscle, and showed a marked deficiency of complex I in her muscle mitochondria. Molecular characterization of her mitochondrial DNA showed a 16093 base pair deletion, but no other abnormalities. No mutation was found in three nuclearly encoded subunits of complex I. However, sequencing of the mitochondrial bifunctional enzyme II (mII) subunit revealed an Asp268-Cys273 mutation, predicted to occur at the active site of the enzyme. This mutation caused substitution of Cys273 with arginine, a change predicted to disrupt the active site. Expression of the mutant enzyme in Escherichia coli showed that the subunit protein was synthesized and assembled with the cofactor in the same proportions as those of the corresponding wild-type enzyme. The mutant enzyme also exhibited a typical proton-motive force-driven oxidase activity. In vitro transcription/translation experiments demonstrated that human mII synthesized in a rabbit reticulocyte system was converted to a biochemically active precursor. These results indicate that the Cys273-Arg substitution in subunit mII causes loss of a catalytic function without major effects on the assembly or stability of the complex. We propose that the Cys273 mutation is responsible for the mild defect of complex I and the mitochondrial myopathy in case 1.Dutton-Violette Dutton-Violette is a French-language surname meaning "of Dutton's/Dutton's d0c515b9f4
