[Techniques of surgical treatment of large wound defects]. The authors describe the surgical techniques used to solve four problems of large wound defects: cover defects, soft tissue defects, bone and implantation problems and problems relating to reconstruction. The cover defects may be repaired either by a pedicled or free flaps of tissue. The soft tissue defects may be repaired by skin grafts or muscle flaps. They also describe different techniques of implantation of bone grafts and prostheses. The techniques described are the most used in their pathology. Some techniques have proved not to be effective and some have been superseded. The authors suggest that whatever is the area of the surgical intervention, combined procedures may be used in case of large defects and that the surgeon should always cooperate with the rehabilitation team.

Q: Remove underscores and upper-case letters from a string? I'm working on an exercise which asks me to remove all of the underscores and upper-case letters from an input string. Here's what I have so far:

def remove_upper(s): s = s.lower() for c in s: if c.isupper(): s = s.replace(c, "") return s print remove_upper('A_B_C')

But the result is 'AB_C', it seems it just ignores the upper-case characters. Is there any way to correct it?

A: EDIT: While Andrei's answer is nice, I think mine is preferable since it is shorter and doesn't call replace inside the loop. I also wanted to take a moment to "toast" the significance of the upper and lowercase letters (especially in the context of filenames) so I added that line in the original version.

OP. original: `def remove_upper(s): return "".join(c for c in s if not (c.isupper() and c.islower()))` print remove_upper('A_B_C')

Toasted: It is traditional to assume that filenames are stored in lowercase, and to refer to them as such (in the user interface and in the program). This is especially significant when the operating system or language has no concept of case. For
