"This technology unlocks the players' authentic movements and gives them the opportunity to express themselves in a more dynamic way in the new FIFA Soccer experience," explains Sporting Director, Toni, who has worked closely with the player movement engineers to define how the game will handle a more aggressive style of play. Moving Collisions Other new attributes of gameplay for the most advanced version of FIFA Soccer can be found on the pitch. Players, defenders and goalkeepers now interact with each other more dynamically in the way they move through a match. "Many of our fans, over the years, have told us that they want more violence on the pitch in FIFA - now they will get it," added Toni. "The football world is looking to FIFA to deliver the most authentic and exciting football experience, and for FIFA 22, that means giving our fans the same experience on the pitch as they do at home. "With HyperMotion Technology, players will have a much more dynamic and physical on-pitch feel, with exaggerated movements and reactions such as backwards and lateral movements that many players now use to disrupt the passing, movement and ball control of their opponents." Also featured in FIFA 22, players will now pull off more balletic attacking movements, from long-range runs and corners to attacking one-twos and accelerating through-balls. Players will now also be given more individuality through the introduction of pre-match warm-ups, with each player able to customise their movement and tactics in the pre-match warm-up. Personal Style It's not just the movement of the players that will be enhanced in FIFA 22. The way the teams and the stadiums are designed in the game will be altered to incorporate the most realistic contextual atmospheres. "In addition to the actual stadiums and teams that fans get to play as in FIFA, fans will also be able to build their own custom clubs in the MyClub and MyTeam modes and we have given our fans a number of tools that will allow them to personalise their teams to their own standards. "We have listened to feedback from our fans over the years and with these innovations and features we wanted to enable them to create and share their own clubs and teams that other fans can use." With the introduction of customisable clubs, fan-created clubs will also be able to enjoy the new attributes of gameplay
