[IMG] The program features classic Pong gameplay like you played as a child. Play against the computer (skills will eventually improve) or play on 2 machines at the same time, just like you played as a child. Choose from a blue screen with white pinballs, blue screen with white stichball or play on a black screen. If you like pong/video games please support the developer by buying Pong Screensaver so that this game can be developed further. The Logo used in this screensaver is based on the simple design of the first Pong game. Visit [\[URL\]www.arcadekingdom.com\[/URL\]](http://www.arcadekingdom.com) and [\[URL\]www.pongscreen.com\[/URL\]](http://www.pongscreen.com) for more info. Pong Screensaver was written in Windows-3.1 32bit in C++ using Microsoft Microsoft Visual C++ 5.0 IDE version 6.0 Thanks to the folks in The Original Box for the music and of course all the Atari folks like Ralph Baer, and the crazy Atari 2600 guys like Dan Gorski and Peter Misek. I have tried to keep the code below as simple as possible. All I ask is that if you enjoy this screen saver and Pong as a whole, please please do not make it the focus of stealing. That's why I use the [\[URL\]](#) and [\[URL\]](#) sites as a reference and source to help me improve this program. Would you use a product if the maker made it the focus of stealing? It's the only way I can continue creating/writing Pong Screensavers. Oh, and one more thing, before you try to send me a bunch of insulting emails complaining about how I am stealing from you.... at least be cool and give me credit for the programming, coding, artwork/concept, and the artwork/concepts you have stolen from me. Though I do thank you for teaching me a lot in the Pong Screensaver world. I wish I had thought of putting a picture of Ralph Baer in the screensaver better position, though I'm glad you noticed that to. Thanks for the comment. Thank you so

Also included is the original video game Pong by, Ralph Baer. This is an actual game for the Apple II with Pong screensaver. Pong Screensaver Features: - Plays Pong! - Retains PONG as a screensaver - Runs on a Mac running OS-X, Windows and Linux. - For 3.1 or higher The Pong Screensaver was developed to be a small program based on the original video game Pong. The two sides are actually playing each other. Who knows who will win? Pong as well as video games themselves were invented by Ralph Baer in the 1960s when he introduced 7 prototypes. The last prototype released in 1968 known as "The Brown Box" played Ball & Paddle games, Target Shooting games, and more. Included with this setup is a picture of Ralph Baer just incase you were interested. Pong Screensaver Description: Also included is the original video game Pong by, Ralph Baer. I'm in a class right now where I have to have a program that calculates a number. And when I use this setup that I've used before, it works perfectly. The only thing different in this program is that this value may be calculated more than once, and I don't want to repeat this while calculating each time. So I wrote another class that calculates the number and then creates a new thread in the main class. However, I can't get it to do what it does when the value is only calculated once. If anyone can help me out, I'd greatly appreciate it. System.Threading.Thread code for the class itself: class MyThread { public MyThread() { base.Func = function() { while(condition) {
