Reliability and validity of a 24-h recall dietary assessment instrument for the Chinese population aged 15 and older in Hong Kong. To assess the reliability, validity and factor structure of a 24-h recall diet assessment instrument for the Chinese population aged 15 and older. A cross-sectional observational study. The Hasslefree Eating Index (HFI) and the Nutrient Related Behaviours Questionnaire were used to assess the reliability of the HFI from participants aged 15-44 years. A random sample of 250 participants aged 45 years and older from the general population were recruited. The HFI, food frequency questionnaire (FFQ) and 3-day weighed food records were used to assess the validity of the HFI. The HFI was also used to measure the reliability of the FFQ. The HFI and FFQ were administered twice within a 2-week interval. The FFQ was completed before the HFI. The repeatability of the HFI was excellent. The correlations with energy intake (EI) ($r = 0.83$ and 0.75) and nutrient intake ($r = 0.72$ and 0.79) were high, and ranged from moderate to good when compared with the results of the 3-day weighed food records. The factor analysis confirmed a single component consisting of nine factors. There was good agreement between the dietary indices. The HFI is a reliable instrument for measuring dietary behaviours. Its use can help to identify short- and long-term dietary changes for public health interventions. Objective assessment of cognitive and perceptual impairments in hearing-impaired, elderly persons. This study evaluates the utility of the Papanicolaou Tinnitus Questionnaire and the prototype Cognition Visual Perception Test (VET) in characterizing the cognitive impairments of elderly hearing-impaired subjects. Thirty-two volunteer subjects with tinnitus of at least moderate severity and 25 healthy-age-matched controls were recruited. The Tinnitus Questionnaire served as a general indicator of cognitive impairments. The VET, a prototype computer-based test battery designed 3a67dffeec

It is a very lightweight application which will not take up much space on your computer. This invention relates to packaging, and more particularly to injection molded plastic packages and methods of producing such packages. There are many designs for reclosable packaging. Often such packaging is used to contain contents such as food, and it is essential that the packaging be leak proof. If the package contains a fluid, it is important that the fluid remain confined, preferably in a leak proof zone, until the package is to be opened. Examples of previously known reclosable packages can be seen in the following U.S. Pat. Nos.: 3,083,600 (Sarasola); 3,693,986 (Sarasola); 3,811,980 (Savadove); 3,819,808 (Savadove); 3,846,843 (Van Dien); 3,879,855 (Van Dien); 4,066,585 (Savadove); 4,066,587 (Savadove); 4,069,835 (Van Dien); 4,102,187 (Savadove); 4,154,468 (Savadove); 4,239,003 (Savadove); and 4,355,506 (Savadove). In the Savadove '681 patent, the package comprises a sheet
