The difference between what you can do with Photoshop and what you can do with a simple image editing application such as Paint Shop Pro is that Photoshop enables you to drastically change your images by creating new layers and modifying and combining layers. This introduces a variety of more complex topics in areas such as Color Matching, Color Correction, and Color Management. If you're new to Photoshop and have an image to work with, you may wish to start with a basic tutorial and then work your way through a basic lesson that covers the important features of Photoshop. For example, the following lesson shows how to use the Quick Fix options in Photoshop, how to use Photoshop's Organizer tools, how to use Photoshop's Layers, and how to add text to an image. ## Adjustment Layers Some of the most important features that you use in Photoshop are adjustment layers. These layers are different from other layers because they behave differently when you paint with the eyedropper tool on an image. After you create an adjustment layer, you can change its settings and even move it around on the page. The following are the basic adjustments: * Color: The color of an image can change based on the color of the background or, in the case of a color selection, based on the color of the background. If you want to change the color of the original image, make sure that the Color Picker tool (usually selected by default) is active and click in the area of the image that you want to change the color of. * Opacity: Transparency affects the image's transparency (and, in most cases, the visibility of the background). The Opacity setting controls how transparent the image is. Opacity settings range from 0 (opaque) to 100 (transparent). * Density: This tool controls the tonal range of an image; lower settings will create a brighter image, and higher settings will produce a darker image. * Contrast: This tool is used to adjust the contrast of an image. High-contrast images look flat and lack color, while low-contrast images may look washed out and lack color. For many images, the easiest and most effective way to adjust contrast is to open the Levels dialog box (Windows) or Levels window (Mac OS). You can view a printout of this dialog at the end of the next exercise in this chapter.

First report of a rare presentation of hemimetallic goitre in a neonate. Hemimetallic goitre is a very rare presentation of the neonatal goitre and may be observed in both sexes of all age groups and it is uncommonly confused with maternal and neonatal thyrotoxicosis and hypothyroidism. We report a case of a neonate, a product of a first twin pregnancy (female). At birth, the newborn showed signs of goitre and was admitted to our Neonatal Intensive Care Unit. The thyroid function tests showed thyrotoxicosis. She was treated with propylthiouracil. The diagnosis of hemimetallic goitre was made by ultrasonography and scintigraphy. To our knowledge, this is the first case that has been reported in the literature.

Senior Caire's TD Garden return You know that you're having a good time when you're older. When Michael Caire, 36, of Middleboro, Massachusetts, started playing some golf in his 50s, that's how he enjoyed it. And he's still enjoying it. "When I started playing golf, it was just a game to me. I just got lost in it," Caire said. "Then, I came across some video where Tiger [Woods] is golfing and I'm thinking, 'I can learn something from that. I can get better.' That's how I started playing better. That's the story for me." Michael Caire, back at TD Garden for the first time in more than a year, is a good example of a senior athlete having fun. See, Caire knew he wouldn't make it to 50, but he decided to play as long as he could. "I didn't really have to recover well from anything — all-things-considered," said Caire, who retired in his mid-30s after playing golf in his hometown in Vermont. "I wanted to get involved more. Now I come here two or three times a week." Caire came here on Sunday to shoot some pool and plays the occasional game of golf with other retired or older NHL alumni. This is his first trip back to the TD Garden since he was the goalie for two games during
