The assessment of the role of gastroparesis in the gastrointestinal (GI) symptomatology of patients is difficult and unreliable when using commonly used procedures. To study the sensitivity and specificity of the gastric emptying scan in the assessment of gastroparesis we studied 35 patients referred with GI symptoms in whom upper gastrointestinal endoscopy had demonstrated a gastric outlet obstruction. Gastric emptying studies were performed before and after bilateral jejunal infusion of 50% dextrose at 10 ml/min for 75 min. Gastric emptying was assessed by measuring the time taken for 57Co-labeled ethyleneamine-1-acetate to reach the end of the jejunal infusion, and also by the half-emptying time. Gastric emptying scan was abnormal in 19 patients but only gastroparesis was detected in all 19. Three of 14 patients with gastric emptying scan evidence of rapid gastric emptying but no upper GI symptoms also had gastroparesis demonstrated on gastric emptying scan after jejunal infusion of 50% dextrose

Deoxynivalenol Promotes Maturation of Dendritic Cells Through EGFR-NF-κB Signaling Pathway in Mice. Deoxynivalenol (DON), a toxic fungal metabolite, has been suggested to be associated with the induction and deterioration of multiple immune diseases. Here, we investigate the effects of DON on the development and maturation of dendritic cells (DCs) in vivo and in vitro. Results showed that DON (10 μg/ml) caused the disappearance of immature and the decrease in mature DCs. After 24 hr stimulation, the productions of TNF-α, IL-6, IL-1β, and IL-10 in DCs were significantly enhanced, and it was accompanied by the activation of EGFR and its downstream NF-κB pathway. The abrogation of EGFR could cause the inhibition of the productions of TNF-α, IL-6, IL-1β, and IL-10. Treatment with DON also resulted in the increased numbers of spleen and bone marrow derived DCs (BMDCs). Additionally, treatment with DON caused the upregulation of the expression of MHC-I and MHC-II on BMDCs. Meanwhile, treatment with DON led to the increased phagocytosis in BMDCs. Taken together, our data indicate that DON has the ability to promote maturation of DCs through EGFR-NF-κB pathway.Q: Check if date greater than two dates - PHP I have two dates in php $s = $date1."
