The "Big & Beefy" burger will be available in the United Kingdom for the first time during the month of February, with the Big & Juicy burger following suit in March, according to Business Insider. They'll join a new California-style bacon sandwich and a grape, spinach and blueberry muffin in an attempt to appeal to younger customers. The new burgers could be part of the fast-food giant's efforts to turn around McDonald's in the U.K., which has fallen on hard times and was recently ranked the fifth-worst city in the U.S. "This is not only about new products, this is about McDonald's changing the culture that we have in our restaurants to make it a less unpleasant experience," head of McDonald's U.K. Terry Duddy told Business Insider. "It's about making sure the food is great, the service is great and the atmosphere is great." McDonald's has been in a steady decline since it was named the most popular fast-food chain in Britain in 2007. It has recently been competing for customers with upstart rivals such as Starbucks and Subway. According to Business Insider, Duddy predicts that the burgers will help to drive sales. "We are looking at more chicken products in the future and we are looking at developing our chicken products to make sure we are offering a great product," he told the news outlet. "This year we are focusing on beef products and we are focused on the meal that we offer, that we are providing a complete meal. We're not just offering a bun with a burger and fries." McDonald's is not the only major fast-food chain to introduce new products in recent years. This summer, Burger King announced plans to release a chicken sandwich and a crispy chicken sandwich. This past year, KFC, Subway and TGI Fridays all unveiled new, limited-time offerings.Saturday, November 6, 2008 I have had 6d1f23a050
