A US official speaking to local media confirmed the story and said that the center is in the works to provide the federal authorities and the federal security forces with resources they need to root out militants and deal with a "variety of threats" in the region. The official made it clear that the center will also provide facilities for the US military presence in the region but did not clarify the exact number of troops who will be there. Read more "America is going to have a presence in Oman. We are deploying a host of soldiers," a US defense official told Reuters. The reports followed multiple media reports that also claimed that there are plans to build a new headquarters for US forces in the Persian Gulf region, with plans to build it at the South Base of the Al Udeid Airbase, Saudi Arabia. Saudi journalist and analyst Ahmed Al-Menhali told RT that the security situation in the region has worsened in recent months and tensions started to rise after the US decided to withdraw forces from Syria and Afghanistan. "The Americans have been trapped. They are being plagued by problems in Syria and Afghanistan. And they
