But lawmakers also have an alternative: rewrite the state constitution. That's what House Speaker Mark Eves and Senate

President Teresa Paiva Weed are proposing. "It would put us in the same boat as Nevada, Oklahoma and a handful of other states," said Eves, D-North Berwick. "We have a real opportunity to jump ship before that boat goes down." A constitutional convention would delegate the rewriting of the constitution to delegates elected by the Legislature. They would draft the language and vote on it. The final product, with any amendments attached, would be approved by lawmakers, who would then send it to Maine voters. The high cost of replacing the Maine Constitution has rankled lawmakers for more than a decade. Some resent the supermajority process that forces a constitutional rewrite unless the Legislature votes yes. The two versions of the proposal

Up to 4 GBÂ .Reactive astrocytomas, including glioblastoma multiforme (GBM), are the most common and deadly adult brain cancers, yet current treatments offer little hope for the majority of patients. Cancer vaccines that can be safely delivered to the brain may offer an effective treatment option for this deadly disease. Glioma Res (2013) 25: 4445-4550; Cohen O, et al. Blood (2008) 21: 2303-2310. Whereas this efficacy has been observed for the adjuvant treatment of glioma in the intracranial space, the systemic administration of vaccines has not been successful. The increased permeability of the blood-brain barrier (BBB), along with the immune privileged nature of the central nervous system (CNS), contribute to the reluctance of most therapeutic vaccines to reach the CNS. Intratumorally (IT) delivered tumor-specific vaccines provide a locally targeted and potent immune response against the residual tumor after standard therapies. We have observed that GBM patients treated with IT vaccination in combination with a surgical resection generated a local and systemic antitumor immune response. (Cohen et al. Blood (2008) 21: 2303-2310; Pandher R, et al. Science (2004) 304: 841-845; Henderson P M, et al. J Clin Invest (2011) 121: 3647-3655). Intratumoral (IT) immunotherapy relies on the ability of the human body to recruit effector cells to the cancer site, and in many cases requires the surgical resection of a tumor as a
