Unlike many similar publications, here, for the first time, offers a complete and varied set of recipes, both simple and complex, using accessible and easily obtained products. The recipes are tailored to the specifics of cooking for children. They give an accurate calculation of the number of ingredients needed, allowing you to successfully prepare meals for both a family of four or five and a large company. Recipes are written in clear and accessible language and enhanced with colorful illustrations to help children memorize the taste and all the steps in the preparation of their favorite meal. The recipes give product weights in grams. This book can be a good helper for parents, teachers, and workers in children's cafes and restaurants. The recipes give weights in grams. "Schoolchildren's Culinary Dictionary" will be a real helper in learning about school dishes and their preparation. It contains all the necessary ingredients that can be found in the school cafeteria. The book provides a detailed description of the dishes, caloric content, chemical composition, and useful properties of each dish, which will help students with the choice of dishes for their menu. This book is not only a collection of recipes for school dishes, but also a collection of culinary words (names of dishes).

A: The problem is most likely that you need to switch the position of the @ and the variable name. Your code looks like this to me: What you need is to switch the @ and the variable name, like this: `$arr = preg_split('/[-_]/', $campos);` This would be the final code: `$array = preg_split('/[-_]/', $campos, -1, PREG_SPLIT_NO_EMPTY);` The reason why you cannot get proper results, is that every other match (i.e. strings that don't fit the regexp) is assigned to the array. San Juan Record Classifieds, Events, Businesses In Monticello, San Juan County, Utah May 19, 2013 | 4399 views | 0 | 153 | | PRESCOTT - The Monticello's sixth grade students are the proud owners of a map of the world. The students conducted a global study and created a map and a timeline for events in each country. The students requested that their map be delivered to the county's junior high and high school because they believed the information would be beneficial for students in those areas. The students researched the country by asking questions such as what they like about the country? Where do they live? How old are they? Who are their leaders? The country the students found was Jamaica. They learned about the Jamaican people and how they live in that country. The students learned about the government of Jamaica and the history of the island. The students learned about the geography of Jamaica. The classes learned how Jamaica is located in the Caribbean Sea, and that it is bordered by Cuba, Venezuela, and the Atlantic Ocean. The students learned about the economy of Jamaica. They learned that the economy of Jamaica is different from that of the United States because the Jamaican government offers inexpensive education, an excellent health care system, and a strong military. One of the students learned that Jamaica is the only English-speaking country that is a member of the Commonwealth of Nations. The students learned that part of the island is covered with dense vegetation and mountainous regions. The students learned that Jamaica is an independent nation and has a government that is divided into 17 provinces. On the timeline c6a93da74d
