the final round of the season is at valencia, where marquez will be looking to secure his fourth premier-class title and record-equalling fifth world championship. the new track is yet to be tested by marquez, but the 26-year-old has taken to the valencia circuit well in the past. he was third and second here in 2010 and 2011 respectively, and also has a good record at the spanish track, winning twice before in the 125cc class. he is also a three-time winner at the circuit ricardo tormo. the final round of the championship, the japanese grand prix, was held at the suzuka circuit. it was the first time the japanese gp had been held on an oval, and it was also the first time the series had visited japan since the inaugural round in 1996. with the title decided in the previous weekend, marc, now up to second place, looked to be the man to beat, but for the first time in the championship he was being closely chased by rossi and lorenzo. in a great race, marc managed to beat lorenzo by a tenth of a second to take the championship by a single point. the italian rider had taken a ten-point lead over his teammate at the start of the season, but he had been unable to build on that until the final round of the year, while marquez was able to beat him at the weekend where it counted. marcs run of form continued, as he ended the first half of the season with a perfect 15-0 record, which equalled rossi for most wins and gave him the fastest lap of the season at the sachsenring. although he had just two podium finishes and was two rounds behind dovizioso in the championship, marc had the advantage of four races to close the gap as the second half of the season resumed with another trip to france. third place at le mans

was the best result of the weekend, with rossi and viales taking the front row. in the race, the spaniard survived a scare when rossi overtook him at the start but was given a drive-through penalty for an unsafe start, leaving him back in second. he held on to take his third podium of the season and was third in the standings. a tough race at assen proved costly as a first-lap fall ended his campaign, putting him down to fifth in the championship. he rebounded from this disappointment with a third-place finish at brno and was fourth in the standings, just two points behind third-placed lorenzo.
