the faa is currently working on a new type certificate and certificate documents to be issued. these documents are expected to be issued by the faa this fall. new sales of x-plane will be made subject to those certificates and documents. until this happens, we are still able to sell x-plane to ga certificated pilots. additionally, the faa will be updating some of the new rules and regulations and we have incorporated these into x-plane. aircraft sold after march 17, 2019, will contain the ability to view the new rules and regulations, as well as the corresponding information for each and every flight scenario. the faa requirements are in place, and x-plane will be adjusting as new documents are developed and made available. please use aircraft and flight scenarios after march 17, 2019 to view the new rules and regulations as they will be in effect. if you wish to view these requirements in the x-plane mobile app, it is possible to obtain a certificate number as well as information about the new rules and regulations by purchasing the app after march 17. you can purchase unlimited downloads of x-plane at no charge from the itunes store . if you have purchased aircraft in previous versions of the app, you will have access to all of your purchased aircraft at any subscription level. one area that was upgraded in fjs software is the readiness prognostic and that is called "ready" by flysim and it automatically lights up a led inside of the cockpit or on the panel depending on whether you are ready for that phase of the flight plan. its like a light show sequence to indicate next steps for that flight plan. this shows if you are ready to proceed with "next step" or "go" from previous steps. you can also program in a "go" message in the cockpit as a final message to the other pilots. its new and is very convenient but being able to actually see this is a good idea so its a nice add on here.

[X-Plane] 737-200 Latest Version

If you are installing on your Apple or Android mobile device, you will need to select to download X-Plane in the Google Play or App Store, respectively. After installation is complete, you will be able to download X-Plane right from the X-Plane main menu. Tap the Menu button and tap Open Installer to download the latest version. If you are installing on a different device, see the X-Plane Downloads section below for instructions on where to locate the latest version. Flat panel inlet sizes in X-Plane Pro are now limited to the original Boeing 737 type certificated panel or, if using a VFR panel, the original 737 panel approved for that flight crew configuration type. See Flight Design's FAQ, Working with Panel Inlets for more information. The FJS B732 may appear rather large and bold compared to other aircraft. The default scheme is pretty minimalist but is far more immersive than earlier X-Planes. For that reason, some people have asked for more colors. To enable color in the existing scheme, for example, to use the blue and gold colors of the 777 instead of grey and white, open Aircraft.xml in the X-Plane folder and scroll down to near the bottom of the XML file. The file should look like: X-Plane typically runs well on any of the available configurations of your hardware. The most common issue is overheating from running the CPU at full tilt. Follow these steps to protect your hardware: Since there are 14 aircraft from FlyJSim I am going to skip naming and point out one by one. You will see that many of the FlyJSim aircraft have one or more parameters set differently than the X-Plane aircraft, and FlyJSim is honoring those parameters and using that to set the aircraft in the simulation.
