Many modern software, including video editing software, has been migrated to a more convenient interface. For example, the video editing software on Mac is more visual and has more complicated functions than the one in Windows. Although the most of the former are usually built-in functions of Intel chip, some of them could be added by third party plugin. The audio and video could be edited, synced and exported together. As the specific focus of the software, there is seldom a need to explore the inner details of the hardware, while only a very limited of the function could be experienced. It is within the boundary of the program, where we could get more enjoyable experience. Nonetheless, in many cases, the software has become a closed-platform. Most of the recently-released video editing software is not available on the other system, even though they are installed on the same computer. Besides the closed-platform, a software designer is usually limited by the necessary hardware and resources he had. For example, the minimum equipment required to run the video editing software, including the personal computer and peripheral devices, is the prerequisite to the user. Wysiwyg Perform has combined all the features of every movie editing and video creating software at one place, the timeline interface is exactly the touch of the time, and the time of the video becomes the non-linear editing. Figures 7 and 7 present two further editing interface of the new software. Figure 7 present another interface of Tik Tok. Figure 7 comes from the front page of a Tik Tok video, revealing the new interface to find out about the users. Figure 7 has a "setting" tab, that allow users to select highlights, videos, and photos in the past time within the video, as well as saving all these different places. Thus, users could retrieve them simply by opening the video. 5ec8ef588b
