next, click start >> control panel >> programs & features. next, click "turn windows features on or off". finally, click "turn windows features on". (for a refresher on enabling or disabling windows features and the reason for doing so, see turn on or off features in windows operating system.) after all of this, install the.net framework 4.5 (32-bit or 64-bit) or 4.5.1 (32-bit or 64-bit) or 4.2 (32-bit or 64-bit). on a related note, if you update the.net framework version on the storefront server but the client still cant install, make sure that the client has the appropriate.net framework in its dependencies. if the.net framework does not install properly, you might need to consider re-installing windows, you should always backup any important files first before doing this though. also, make sure you uninstall the.net framework before doing so. a remote-host firewall administrator connects to one of sql server denali's four availability groups through a vpn gateway/jump host. when the vpn gateway/jump host fails, the local gateway is assigned as the active-standby gateway. when the connection between the gateway and the server goes down, the connection between the server and the firewall administrator is also lost. the firewall administrator and the sql server denali administrative account have an alwayson group in the sql server instance using the group server name (xxxxxxxxxx).after the gateway and the server come back up, if the sql server denali alwayson group membership between the firewall administrator and the sql server instance is unavailable because the group database is unavailable due to a disaster recovery or planned outage, the firewall administrator must rejoin the alwayson group, which can take multiple minutes to complete, depending on the number of concurrent users.
