Q: How to run a distributed server in multiple nodes and then display in browser? I am trying to run a java application in multiple nodes using mapreduce and then display them in a browser? In the past I have tried to do this using derby but it was slow.

A: The simplest way would be to use a NoSQL database, like MongoDB, that can be accessed via RESTful web services. This way, your MapReduce tasks will not need to communicate with the database; instead, all of the DB connections and database data access will be handled by the REST service.
