Cobalt(III) amide complexes of the type [Me2NH][Co(III)L]- were used as precatalysts in the hydroformylation of (alpha-allenyl)alkanes, enaminones, and alpha-diazocompounds. Variation in the para-substituent on the amide substituent systematically affected the reactivity of the cobalt(III) amide complexes in the reaction. The reaction proceeded with high selectivity in the case of the all-carbon-substituted amides. In these cases, a mechanism is proposed in which the alpha-amino substituent of the amide, a bridging ligand in the cobalt(III) amide complex, exerts a ligand-to-metal charge-transfer (LMC-T) effect, which stabilizes the active dicoordinated cobalt(III) amide complex. This effect is masked by the nonbonding interaction of the HOMO in the amide substituent with the Co(II) center in the neutral starting material of the reaction.Q: How to define a congruence relation to generate a monoid I need to design a SODA online poker program. The goal is to find whether a hand is a winning hand, and if it is, to determine the amount of money that should be sent to the player. We must define a congruence relation to work around a browser's lack of support for online poker. Here is my design. Every hand in the deck is treated as a value. Suppose we are dealing the hand "AC" instead of "ACK":
